Service Outline:

The Undergraduate General Practice is the department where up to 165 dental students and 40 Oral Health Care students from the University of Sydney carry out their clinical education and training, while delivering oral health care to eligible patients.

The students are taught by members of staff from the Faculty of Dentistry and are assisted and supported in the clinics by hospital staff in the UGP department.

Students carry out comprehensive dental treatment for their patients, including periodontics, periodontal surgery, conservative/restorative dentistry, endodontics, fixed/ removable prosthodontics, paedodontics and emergency care.

Staff in UGP are involved in the orientation of new students to the department, which includes training in the principles of infection control guidelines, standard precautions and assisting students when they are treating patients.
